

People tend to speak much louder on cell phones than in person. The Rings of cell phones are annoying. It's bad enough to put up with all of those intrusions in airports, but to have to listen to it during flights would make what are already uncomfortable situations quite unbearable. No need for this. All of us can put our personal and professional selves aside for the length of a flight.